gloves, black slippers and a satchel filled with small editions of the Evening Bulletin attached by a white satin ribbon with "Extra" "Special" in red upon its surface, was slung across her shoulder. She carried a pine nez and when she saw a striking costume took out from the satchel a note-book and jotted down descriptions, etc. She caricatured the newboys and shouted "Extra Bulletin."

The supper was served in the dining-room and along the lanais. Dancing continued until a late hour and reluctant good-byes were exchanged and the Mardi Gras was voted a grand success.

To Mrs. Helen Noonan, Miss Nolte and Mr. James McGraw credit is due to the making and decoration of the throne and the boxes, and the lanais and ball-room were the handwork of the rest of the committee in charge. The success of the undertaking was due to the untiring energy of the Vice President of the League, Mrs. W. M. Graham, ably assisted by the President, Mr. D. Howard Hitchcock. The different committees worked like trojans and the costume committee for days met at Mrs. A. Wilder's to design the Court dresses and the Queen's robes.

Everything seemed to go smoothly and the various committees worked like one small body. Mr. Gurrey's unique little souvenir of the occasion has been much admired. The supper was under the direction of Mrs. Harry Lewis, assisted by Miss Winston, and it was voted good. Mr. Ellis' orchestra and Mr. Berger's band played unceasingly and delighted the many strangers. Mr. Hertsche did all in his power to make the evening pleasant, and the League won appreciation.

The list of patronesses is as follows: Princess Kawananakoa, Mrs. Clarence H. Cooke, Mrs. J. S. McGraw, Mrs. E. D. Tenney, Mrs. C. du Roi, Mrs. S. M. Damon, Mrs. Maudie Phillips, Mrs. A. W. ### Overheard at the Mardi Gras

Little Red Riding Hood to unmasked spectator: "Oh, yes; don't fear; no pillika!" upon being asked "Do I know you unmasked?"
Big Clown (to fair unknown): "Do you know who I am?" "Oh, yes; I knew you were a fool!" said the fair one, sweetly.

Two little red devils who arrived with their respective spouses in evening dress, upon reaching the dressing room put on their dominoes, gowns immediately to the ball-room, leaving the two "hubbies" cooling their heads for three-quarters of an hour waiting for the two naughty wives. It finally dawned upon Mr. W., who said: "I believe these girls are fooling us." Mr. S. also still holding the orchid bouquet, rushed to the ball-room in search of his wife.

There were many amusing little incidents at the Mardi Gras. Wives were torn from their husbands and forced to listen to very up-to-date conversations—regular Mardi Gras fashion.

A certain smart dame of high degree found herself talking to an amusing clown whom she thought to be her next-door neighbor, and it proved embarrassing. It was a terrible moment for the exclusive member of Honolulu's "high society."

On the lawn at the rear of the hotel a crowd of nearly three hundred had gathered to see as much as could be seen without the aid of the mystic yellow ticket.

An excellent view of the maskers was had from this point of vantage as they passed along the lanai to the ball-room. The lawn settees, made to accommodate four persons comfortably, were required to do duty for six. No sooner had the band left the summer-house on the lawn, than the seats were gobbled up in a manner that reminded one of apple-stealing exploits of boyhood days.

One young lady had perched herself on the top rail of a bettee, while her companions, three in number, occupied the remainder of the seat in an orthodox manner. At the appearance of the "rooster" the companions of the high-perched young lady sprang to their feet, the better to see all that was going on, and if it had not been for a gentleman standing just behind the high-perched young lady it is feared there would have been exhibited a costume not down on the books.

Later on during the evening quite a number of "fortunates" mingled with "unfortunates" on the lawn. It was an unusual sight to see one of the "saturnic imps" standing at the water's edge listening to the music of the waves as they splashed on the sands.

A little girl was heard to interpose her mother: "Mamma, what do those people put on them funny things for?" To which the mother replied, "Because they have got more than two dollars and a half, I expect."

Sam Johnson left the scene of festivities early. He wore the costume of a Japanese warrior of the sixteenth century and as it weighed seventy-five pounds he found it rather warm. Sam stated that when he left the ball it really only weighed sixty-five pounds, as he had lost ten pounds of flesh himself so that much less to carry around.

Ex-County Attorney Eddie Douthett wore a domino half black and half white, which caused many to ask if he were masquerading as a favorite brand of Scotch.

When George Davis came out after unmasking, someone unkindly asked him whether he went as a student or a butler, which caused a tart rejoinder from the attorney, who was attracted in the costume of Queen's counselor, which he has every right to wear.

There was one rather stout lady on the floor who, while still masked, asked Walter Doyle if he knew who she was. The latter, in one of his fits of gallantry, replied: "Oh, yes; you are G—C—." (mentioning a very trim little lady who weighs about 100 pounds). He receives a cold nod now as they pass by.

One member of the legal profession asked the other for a suggestion for his costume and was advised to go disguised as an attorney. This happened in the Attorney General's Department. Another distinguished legal light was advised to chalk his head and go as a billiard cue.

A charming tea was given by Mrs. George Potter at her villa in Nuuanu Valley on Monday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Francis P. Burke of New York, who is a guest with her son at the Moana Hotel.

Mrs. Potter presented the guests to Mrs. Burke, who was daintily dressed in white and carried a bouquet of violets. Mrs. Burke has a lovely face and charmed everybody by her sweet manner. Mrs. Potter looked very pretty in a white-embroidered frock, and the rooms were fragrant with roses, which were scattered about in great abundance—La France, Gordon Bennett and the American Beauties made a fine showing. Before the doors and windows ropes of delicate vines made fragrant portieres. At the entrance a large bowl of milk flowers, with their waxy leaves, was much admired, and in the dining-room a tall jar of ornamental vines looked most artistic. Roses adorned the little tables placed in the library and dining-rooms, and the tea-cloths were also embroidered in roses. Miss Lady Macfarlane presided over the punch-bowl and pretty girl, among whom were Misses Marion Scott, Lorna Lauke, Trevellyn, Ethel Monsarrat, Alice Schaefer, Helen Alexander, Helen and Alice Macfarlane, Cordelia Walker, passed the delicious refreshments. Among the guests were Mrs. James B. Castle, Mrs. Francis M. Swenzy, Mrs. Henry Macfarlane, Mrs. Fred Macfarlane, Mrs. Harry Macfarlane Jr., Mrs. A. Gartley, Mrs. Charles Wilder, Mrs. Gulick, Mrs. Spalding, Miss Spalding, Mrs. Richard Ivers, Mrs. John Russell, Mrs. S. M. Damon, Mrs. J. S. Walker, Mrs. F. H. Humphris, Mrs. Alexander, Mrs. A. Fong, Mrs. Alexander Lindzey, Mrs. Francis Gay, Mrs. Herman Focke, Mrs. George Rodiek, Mrs. A. Fuller, Miss Walker, Mrs. M. Phillips, Miss Jessie Kaufman, Miss Waterman, Mrs. Brainerd Smith, Mrs. Brock, Mrs. von Holt, and Mrs. A. G. Hawes Jr.

The Tuttle-Monsarrat wedding on Monday evening at St. Andrew's Cathedral was celebrated before a large number of relatives and friends. The solemn service of the Episcopal Church was used and the Rev. Canon Macintosh performed the impressive service. Precisely at 8 o'clock the wedding party walked up the aisle to the chancel steps. Miss Tuttle, a beautiful girl, on the arm of Mr. Alan E. Douglas, was met at the altar by the groom, who was supported by Mr. J. O. Carter Jr. The bridesmaid, Miss Marie Douglas, preceded the bride to the altar. When the newly married couple walked down the aisle the glorious strains of the "Wedding March," magnificently played by Mr. Bode, pealed forth.

The bride wore an exquisite frock of real lace over chiffon and tulle, en-

Princess, and this was trimmed with chiffon roses. She wore a veil which was held in place by orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses. The costume enhanced the beauty of the bride, and she was showered with compliments by everybody. The bridesmaid looked very sweet in blue silk lace over tulle of the same hue. This was further embellished with blue satin ribbon, on which were appliqued forget-me-nots and leaves embossed with gold. The shower bouquet was also of forget-me-nots.

Mrs. Monsarrat, the mother of the groom, looked very handsome in a magnificent toilette. The chancel was exquisitely decorated in white lilies, white chrysanthemums and green, and at the foot of the altar were bamboo palms and greens. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Monsarrat were given a reception by Mr. and Mrs. Douglas, and many intimate friends and relatives greeted them on their arrival. Mrs. Douglas was attired in white silk pina over white tulle, and this was appliqued with blue and pink silk. She also wore diamond ornaments. Beautiful presents were on view and they are still arriving.

The farewell banquet which was given by the Japanese merchants at the Shin Rin hotel Friday night in honor of A. K. Ozawa, who leaves for Japan on the America Maru, due here on the 20th, was typically a Japanese affair.

The decorations were the national flags and Japanese lanterns. Prominent among those who attended were Consul General Saito and his secretary, Manager Akai of the Yokohama Specie Bank, Dr. Kobayashi, Haida, Mitamura, Katsuki and Katsunuma, Interpreter Geo. Yamada of the Circuit Court, K. Ono, Tashiro, Nakamura, members of the merchant, hotel and bank unions, pastors of different religious denominations and representatives of practically every walk of life. The tables in the main dining hall were arranged in shoe form and were loaded with all the delicacies of the land of the chrysanthemum. Ozawa, the guest of honor, sat on the makai end, while Consul Saito sat on his right and Mr. Akai on his left. The rest of the guests were given seats according to number, and the hosts, who also acted as waiters, contented themselves in another dining room. Before the feasting was commenced, Rev. Okumura called on Consul Saito for a speech. The Consul said that while he felt sorry for the departure of Ozawa from the islands, he was not at all surprised to know that he with all the prosperous prospects for his future, would enter the mainland law colleges with determination to be sometime in the future a full-fledged lawyer. He hoped that after Ozawa had completed his studies, he would return to Hawaii to render his services. Ozawa had been a valuable citizen and would be all the more valuable after his graduation. He was but thirty-two years old and it would only be a matter of four years absence before he would be back. Consul Saito emphasized the fact that it would be a credit to Japan to have from among her sons in Hawaii one such young man as Ozawa, who was just beginning to prove himself worthy of the consideration of the whole community. At the close of his speech Consul Saito called for banquets and proposed that all should stand and drink the health and future success of their friend Ozawa. In the absence of Dr. Katsunuma, K. Hara, manager of the Kaimuki hotel, acted as toastmaster. During the dinner, speeches were made by Manager Akai of the Yokohama Specie Bank, M. Kawabara, Kawasaki, Rev. Ito, S. Kojima, Geo. Yamada of the Circuit Court and I. Ishimura. The last named, though a Japanese, who has lived in the islands for the last eighteen years, spoke in Hawaiian and had his remarks interpreted into Japanese. The guests, who were prettily dressed, smiled away the time in a most entertaining manner. Before the guests left the hall, Ozawa was called upon for a speech. He thanked the guests for responding to the invitations extended them by the committee and commented feelingly upon the kindness which he received at their hands. The famous parting Hawaiian song "Aloha oe" was sung and all the guests joined in the chorus.

Last Friday evening at the Moana Hotel Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Case Deering were the host and hostess of a beautiful dinner. The large castle in miniature which adorned the center of the table, was a masterpiece of artistic skill. Red lights illumined the interior in a realistic manner, and the castle was placed in a garden of maidenhair. Hand-painted sam-pans were the odd place-cards, and silver candlesticks with red shades enhanced a charming effect. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Paton, Mr. and Mrs. Hayes-Brooke, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Kimball and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Macfarlane. The whole party went on to the University Hall.

Cards have been received as follows: "The Communal Service will be held in the Mortuary Chapel of Fairmount cemetery where the remains of Edward George Stobler will be removed to the Mausoleum, Wednesday morning, February the sixth, at eleven o'clock. No flowers." Mrs. Stobler has been in Denver for many months attending to the building of the marble mausoleum for the remains of her husband. Now that this is completed she will take a trip to the Orient via Honolulu. Miss Inez MacKinnon, who came from England to visit her in January, will accompany Mrs. Stobler in her travels. Miss MacKinnon, by the way, is engaged to marry a delightful Englishman, Mr. Hardesty, who has a place in Cheshire. She met him in Scotland while visiting her uncle, Mr. Thomas MacKinnon. Miss MacKinnon will not be married for a year. Meanwhile we may have the pleasure of greeting them.

Mrs. George Cook of Marinette, Wis., who is at the Hawaiian Hotel, has sent word to the Chicago and Marinette papers to announce the engagement of her daughter Susanne to Mr. W. D. Adams of this city.

The parade on Washington's Birthday is the next thing to amuse the public. Mr. Walter Dillingham is working hard to get everything in readiness and the various committees have been chosen. The five Princesses of the different islands will properly attract great attention. They are well chosen, for every one is a good horse-woman, and the animals which they will ride are all beauties. There are several loan lunches being given on that day and everything is being done to make the parade a success.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Atkinson are being warmly welcomed to Honolulu. They are the guests at present of Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Wilder in Nuuanu Valley. Mrs. Atkinson, nee Kitchen, is one of the most popular girls here. She is a beautiful creature and at the Mardi Gras the other evening in her exquisite toilette of white tulle lace, tulle and satin, was much admired. There are many dinners and lunches being planned in honor of the bride and groom.

Mrs. Arnold Pike as the French cook, made a decided hit at the Mardi Gras on Tuesday. Her friends did not know her and she followed the Rooster with fire in her eye, and acted the part well.

The military hop at the Seaside on Wednesday evening was well attended by the Army and Navy contingents. Most of the local beaux and belles were too tired to show energy and only remained for a little while. The evening was delightfully spent and everybody seemed to have a good time. The ladies and gentlemen of the transport Logan, were much in evidence. The music was good and the floor perfect.

Lieut. and Mrs. Wesley Hamilton, who are at Fort Flagler, Washington, are quite enjoying the life. Mrs. Hamilton has entirely recovered from her severe illness and is herself once more. As Lillian Bacon she was one of the most popular girls here. Captain and Mrs. Newton are stationed at Worden, which forms a triangle with Flagler and Casey. Lieut. and Mrs. Newton gave an elaborate dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Patterson (nee Stella Love) who live in Seattle, quite recently. They say Mrs. Patterson is looking very pretty, and is happy in her new abode.

The Valentine dance given by the Sophomores of the High School at the Commercial Hall last night was a very brilliant affair.

Beautiful decorations made a perfect beauty bower of the old hall. The credit for the skillful management of things is to be given to Misses Florence Towse, Edith Smith, Dan King and Harold Johnstone.

Hearts of all sizes popped out from most unexpected places and the beautifying throughout was very appropriate to the occasion.

With Scott Pratt as postmaster everybody got a valentine.

The punchbowl was presided over by Miss Ethel Carter.

A reception was given on Wednesday in honor of Chinese New Year by Consul and Mrs. Chang Tso Fan at the Consulate. The receiving party, besides the popular Consul and his charming wife, were Princess Theresa Wilcox and Miss Chang Amy.

The rich Oriental costumes of the Consul and his wife were much admired. Their daughter was dressed simply in white and looked very sweet and girlish. The several rooms at the Consulate were beautifully decorated and Chinese sweetmeats and punch were generally served. The Hawaiian Band, stationed in the grounds, discoursed sweet music throughout the reception. There was a continual line of callers.

Messrs. W. S. Frazer and H. W. Burden have departed for Guam to take up their duties at the cable station.

Dr. Clifford High's pretty bungalow on Liliha street is being much admired. The proximity to the club house is a great feature for those purchasing property in that part of town.

Among those who arrived in the Korea were Mr. and Mrs. David Rice, prominent Boston people who are living at the Moana hotel. Mrs. Rice (nee Brewer) is a cousin of Judge Hatch. Col. A. G. Hawes, of San Francisco was also an arrival and will visit at Sans Souci for six months. He is looking hale and hearty, notwithstanding his terrible earthquake experiences.

Mr. and Mrs. George Reynolds leave today for a trip to the Sandwich Islands. They will sail from San Francisco January 17. The trip is being taken with a view to the improvement of Mr. Reynolds' health, which has been failing of late.—Salt Lake Republic.

Mr. John H. Bliss and Miss Nannie Whitton entertained at dinner on Friday last for Prince and Princess Kawananakoa and Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Hawes Jr. at the Moana Hotel.
